WHAT YOU CAN DO

- Edit the articles and claim authorship
- Use as web content
- Use for linking purposes (blog comments, article directory submissions, web 2.0 content etc) Sell them (if you have edited them substantially from the original)

WHAT YOU CANNOT DO

- Use the articles undedited
- Sell, or give away the articles undedited
- Sell, or give away the original zip file

ON YOUR OWN SITES

Edit the articles to reflect your "voice" and publish them on your blogs as fresh articles. Your readers will appreciate the great information and Google will see regular new content.

Cut the articles into smaller snippets and use them as short quotes, within longer articles. It's a great way to break up a long article and make it more interesting.

After editing, create a "word cloud" image with the text. Publish the article as a page on your blog and use the word cloud image as the featured image. No more buying images! You'll have something unique and attractive to make your post stand out.

User Powerpoint, Keynotes or Libre Office to create a presentation with one main point on each slide. You can record a simple voiceover and you'll have a video in minutes. Add the video to your article page. Google will index the actual content and your users will thank you for the video.

Combine several articles to make a larger, more authoritative article – you can even turn it into a multi-page series on your blog. E.g. Affiliate Marketing: Part 1 of 4 and so on

You've read just a few of the ways you can use the content we've given you. We regularly send out new ideas and training so keep watching your inbox for even more great tips

Google devours content like a hungry lion and you'd better be able to keep feeding them new content.

With fresh new content, published regularly, you maximize your chances of increasing your revenue. Without new content, your blogs and sites age and wither. Fresh content is what the search engines are always looking for.
